

Destroy Bad Berries

Cotoneaster

Don't use weeds to encourage birds to your garden.

Just as some people can't distinguish between colours, birds can't tell if berries come from good plants or weeds.

Birds eating bad berries can spread seeds into bush areas where these weeds can rapidly grow and take over.

While some native birds have adapted to eating bad berries, their wide range of potential foods mean they won't go hungry if weedy species are removed.

By replacing bad berry weeds with good berry native plants, you can have a beautiful garden that's good for birds as well as the environment.

Be a Weedbuster in your garden and destroy bad berries.

Find out more at www.weedbusters.org.nz

WEEDBUSTERS